THE REAL LILLIAN RUSSEL HERE

Former Actress and Husband. A. P. Moore, Millionaire Pittsburgh Newspaper Man in Town. Is Writing Play about Gettysburg.

Mrs. Lillian Russel Moore said this morning at the Hotel Gettysburg that, after riding over the turnpike from York, she would devote half of the proceeds from a play she is writing about Gettysburg, to the repair of the York road.

It will be recalled that the famous actress, Miss Russel, after a number of former matrimonial adventures, was married to Alexander P. Moore, Pittsburgh newspaper publisher, in July. Mr and Mrs. Moore accompanied by a chauffeur and maid arrived at the Hotel Gettysburg Monday evening. They motored from Philadelphia where Mrs. Moore had met Lubin, of Lubin moving picture fame. Mrs. Moore said that Lubin offered her a contract for a series of motion picture films, but she did not think her present work would permit her making any other engagements. Mrs. Moore has lost none of the charms that made her popular with thousands of admiring theatre patrons. She also retains the art of getting newspaper headlines. She declared that although a farewell tour would have many allurement her home life and her new spasm work kept all thoughts of the stage life in the background. In addition to the drama about Gettysburg for which she came here to gather local color, she is writing newspaper articles that are syndicated and used by some seventy papers.

The announcement that Mrs. Moore would use one half of the proceeds from her new play to repair the York 'pike, she said, was 'the result of the condition of that road, a thoroughfare of my home-state.' When The Times representative explained to Mrs. Moore that the State Highway Department for reconstruction under the Sproul road bill, and that work on a portion of it had already been completed she said, 'at any rate I am willing to do anything I can to relieve the actual suffering other automobilists must endure who motor this way. I have traveled all over the United States and many parts of Europe but never encountered worse roads than this one.' The people of the community will naturally be carried away by this generous offer. Many have offered help but few produced. If the state manages to struggle through the repairs without individual assistance a benefit performance of the proposed play might be given at the Wizard for other roads in the vicinity. The present condition of the road is partly due to the repairs in progress. Drains are being laid and bridges built over several low places. At these points fresh earth and stones piled up for repairs obstruct passage. At several points it is necessary to make detours. This state of affairs is, of course, temporary, and will be done away with when the drains and bridges are in place.

Alexander P. Moore is publisher of the Pittsburgh Leader, and has other extensive newspaper interests. He was one of the delegates to the Republican convention at Chicago and is a figure of national prominence in the Progressive party. In speaking of the political situation, Mr. Moore said, 'Roosevelt will carry Pennsylvania by 200,000. Even though he should be defeated for the presidency, the cause for which he is fighting is won. The people have become imbued with the spirit of progressiveness; that is the big fight. Roosevelt is one of the greatest men the country ever had, and the progressive spirit which he instigated will not die with his defeat. It will continue and change the old condition for the better.' At this point Mr. Moore banded the reporter a cigar. Under strict interpretation of the new advertising law this story should probably be labeled 'advertising.'

Mr. and Mrs. Moore spent part of the day on the battlefield. Fourteen guides applied for the privilege of delineating the memorial struggle. This is the first visit of either of them to Gettysburg and they are enthusiastic over the many points of interest. Mrs. Moore wants to have her manuscript ready for production during the season of 1913-14. It will doubtless be awaited with ill-concealed impatience by those who may have furnished the local color as well as the theatre going public.

STAHL INSTEAD OF STULL

In the account of the death of Samuel Stahl in yesterday's paper the late Mr. Stahl's name was spelled 'Stull.'

This was incorrect, the proper way to spell the name is Stahl.

PARCELS POST IN EFFECT JAN. 1ST.

New Law will Bring about Changes in Gettysburg Mail Service. Will mean Great Benefit to Country People.

Gettysburg post office will receive within the next several weeks instructions from the postmaster general as to the establishment and workings of the new parcels post law, which according to an act passed by the recent congress goes into effect in Gettysburg and elsewhere throughout the United States January 1, 1913.

The new law will bring about changes in the mail service in Adams county and in every nook and corner of the country, the most remote rural habitation being affected. It was intended by the lawmakers that the change should be for the improvement of the service and it will give the householder, the merchant and the farmer opportunities such as they never enjoyed before.

While the law in its completeness can hardly be put into effect at the time designated, as the many innovations must be introduced gradually, but ultimately it will mean that the business of every postoffice and every rural mail route in Adams county will be doubled and perhaps trebled. It will mean in Gettysburg the working force must be increased in the course of time.

At present the limit on packages is four pounds, whereas under the new conditions the limit will be 11 pounds. However, the present postage rates are prohibitive for many of the articles that enter into the cost of living, whereas the new postage rates will permit produce to be shipped to city dwellers from the country and the shipment of merchandise to the farm dweller. Under the new arrangement the stores in Gettysburg will undoubtedly develop a mail order department sending merchandise to every part of county.

The present rates for merchandise and the like is 1 cent an ounce, the charges being 64 cents for a four pound package. Under the parcels post a four pound package can be sent anywhere within a 50 mile zone for 14 cents, the rate being 5 cents for the first pound and 3 cents for each additional pound. A package weighing 11 pounds, the limit, can be sent within 50 miles for 35 cents. However, when the packages become of such size that the charges amount to more than 25 cents it will be just as cheap to send the article by express, between points where there are express offices.

Under the parcels post, eggs, butter, dressed poultry during certain seasons and practically all produce can be sent by mail. It is generally known that in the price of meats, poultry and the like there is a great difference between the prices on the farm and in the city.

BUILDING BOOM IN NEW OXFORD

Work on the new buildings in course of erection in New Oxford, which had been retarded considerably for some time on account of difficulty in securing necessary lumber, etc., is now proceeding rapidly. The plasterers are at work on the interior of the new public school building pushing it along toward completion. The large new St. Paul's Reformed church is under roof and the Parochial school building is also about under roof. The brick work on the 40 x 88 foot addition to the New Oxford Shoe company's plant is going up rapidly, and the foundation walls for J. A. Cashman's brick dwelling are completed. Work on the new brick house of druggist Edward T. Anker, Pitt street, is progressing.

TEACHERS MEET IN DECEMBER

Preparations are being made for the sixty third session of the Pennsylvania State Educational Association, which will be held in Harrisburg on December 26, 27 and 28. The general sessions as well as departmental meetings, will be held in the Technical High school building. The executive committee is composed of George Becht, of Harrisburg; F. W. Robbins, Lebanon; W. L. Smith, Pittsburgh; F. E. Downes, Harrisburg; E. M. Rapp, Reading, and N. C. Schaeffer, of Harrisburg, ex-officio.

YORK FAIR OPENS TODAY

The fifty fifth annual exhibition of the York County Agricultural Society opened today and will continue until Friday inclusive. According to the managers the York Fair this year will surpass all others in the number, variety and quality of exhibits. Every department will be filled to its utmost. There will be more than 1,000 poultry exhibits and 800 cattle will be on the grounds.

ST. JAMES CHURCH TO ENTERTAIN

Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society will be held Here October 23, 24 and 25. 125 Delegates will be here.

For the second time in its history St. James Lutheran Church will entertain the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the West Pennsylvania Synod during the annual convention to be held here from October 23d to the 25th inclusive. Thirty years have past since the society has met with St. James. In 1883, the second year of its organization, the York street congregation acted as host to this body of visitors.

The College Lutheran Church which also holds membership in the society has generously offered to assist in entertainment of the delegates. The college church entertained the society in 1891 and again, at the last meeting held in Gettysburg in 1905.

One hundred and twenty five delegates will be here in addition to the general officers and department secretaries. The total number including interested people who usually attend the conventions will probably reach one hundred and fifty. The convention will go into session on Wednesday afternoon, the 23d, at 2 o'clock. In the evening, Mrs. F. C. Karper, of Chambersburg, the societies president, will address the audience.

All day Thursday will be devoted to regular business, with an address in the evening by Rev. G. W. Enders, D. D., of York. Friday morning's session will terminate the convention for the year.

Preparations for the guests are being made under the direction of Mrs. Philip Houck, president of the St. James organization and Mrs. L. L. Sieber, the college Lutheran's president. The program as arranged at present does not provide for any special social entertainment. Regular business sessions will occupy so much of the members time that any social feature can scarcely be added. Both local societies held their regular monthly meetings Monday afternoon at which time final provision was made for lodging the delegates during their stay here.

SUCCESSFUL FARMER'S DAY

Waynesboro "Farmer's Day" was an unqualified success according to accounts of the papers from that town. More than 5000 farmers were said to have been there. A movement is on foot for a similar fair in Gettysburg and there is no reason why it could not be held here. The proposition will be presented to the Board of Trade at a meeting to be held Thursday. A petition is at present being circulated among the merchants who favor holding such a fair. Not a few Adams county people attended Waynesboro's exhibition as is shown by the following account from The Daily Record. "One of the most novel features of Farmers day and one which attracted lots of attention was the wagon load of people brought here from Zora, Adams county, by Maxwell and Stine. They drove up in front of W. A. Hess' book store at 10.50 in the morning. In their wagon, which was drawn by six horses, were 62 people. Some of the visitors, who came in the long wagon, were advanced in years and some had only a dozen years to their credit. All were in good humor and cheered heartily as they reached here. They started from Zora at 7 o'clock in the morning and came sixteen miles. Over part of the wagon was a canvas cover and extending through the middle of it was a long table on which the people ate their lunch at the noon hour. A rocking chair made the journey comfortable for an aged woman. In the party were two sets of four generations: F. H. Riley, 74 years old; D. P. Riley, 49; V. H. Riley, 23, and D. C. Riley, 2 years old; and P. H. Riley, Mrs. C. L. Harbaugh, Mrs. Ruth Martin and Lena Martin, the latter 14 months old.

INSPECTING SCHOOLS
James G. Pentz, State High School Inspector, is at present inspecting the schools in Adams county. Mr. Pentz arrived Monday, and will remain here until his work is completed. He is accompanied in his trips over the county by Superintendent Roth.

GAS FOR LITTLESTOWN
An application will be made to the Governor of Pennsylvania on October 28th, by R. Hayes Dutton, Rufus A. Colehouse and George D. Gitt, of Hanover, for a charter for the Littlestown Gas Company. The new company will supply gas to the citizens of Littlestown and territory adjacent.

Philip R. Bikle will return from his vacation tomorrow and resume editorial charge of The Times. With the exception of an account of tonight's council meeting and a story about medical examination of school pupils the material of which has already been gathered under present editorial direction, the Wednesday issue of The Times will probably be exceedingly uninteresting.

A bell has been placed on the Belmont school on the Chambersburg pike by the alumnus of the school.

HANOVER OPERA HOUSE SOLD

The Hanover Opera House, with the rights and franchises of the Hanover Market and Town Hall company, has been sold at public sale by the officers of the corporation. David M. Frey was the purchaser, at $8,800—the property was sold subject to a mortgage for twenty business men of the town, who subscribed to a fund to purchase the property. The Hanover Market and Town Hall company was organized in 1886, with a paid-up capital of $250,000. The company erected a building having a market on the first floor and a theatre on the second floor. The market was intended to be the principal feature, but proved a failure from the outset and finally was closed. Three years ago the building was remodeled, at an expense of about $25,000. The upper floor was taken out and a modern theatre, with a seating capacity of 1200, erected on the first floor. The building was enlarged by an addition to the rear, for dressing rooms, a more extensive stage was provided, and all the latest appliances provided for large musical or scenic productions. The theatre is now fully up-to-date, and would be a credit to a much larger town than Hanover.

The farmers of this section are busy cutting corn.

FAUST

Mr. Anthony Andre, who is to appear at the Wizard Theatre Thursday, October 10, in Goethe's immortal "Faust" is said to be unsurpassed in this most difficult role of Mephisto and acceded to be the most powerful delineator of the role of his satanic majesty since the late Lewis Morris. Mr. Andre has a fine stage presence, a powerful well modulated voice and there is an artistic touch to his work that stamps him as one of the foremost character actors of the present day. The cast is made up with many well known people who have been more or less identified with this play for several seasons. Among whom are W. D. Stedman, Charles Wilkinson, Gordon Hallingshead, Laura Hill, Lena Brusch, Rita Mantana, Elsa Brusch and others.—advertisement.

4 KILLED, 4 HURT IN TRAIN WRECK

Collide Head-on Near Shippenburg, Pa.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 8.—Four trainmen were killed and four others more or less seriously hurt in a head-on collision between a train of empty passenger cars and a freight train at Shippenburg, Pa., near Shippenburg.

The dead are: E. S. McClain, conductor of passenger train; J. W. Frederick, fireman; C. R. Gordon, fireman; Frank Crause, freight conductor.

M. L. Athey, brakeman, and M. U. Bream, engineer, received serious wounds, but are expected to recover. The freight train belonged to the Philadelphia & Reading railway, which uses the Western Maryland between Hagerstown and Shippenburg.

The wreck was a head-on collision, the engines smashing into each other with terrific force. Seven steel coal cars were wrecked and three passenger coaches broken to pieces, later taking fire. The passenger train was running from Chambersburg to Shippenburg to take an excursion to Baltimore, and it is said the engineer disregarded the signals.

ADMITS GUILT IN DYNAMITE CASE

One of Defendants Admits Part in Conspiracy.

HE CREATES A SENSATION

Edward Clark, Whose Activities Were Directed Towards Promoting Explosions, Weakens.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 8.—Edward Clark, former business agent of the Ironworkers' union at Cincinnati, changed his plea from not guilty to guilty at the opening of the federal dynamite conspiracy trial.

It was predicted that others of the defendants would follow Clark's example, and that many of the forty-six defendants left would join a stampede to throw themselves upon the mercy of the court.

As soon as court opened District Attorney Charles W. Miller addressed Federal Judge A. B. Anderson.

"If it please the court, the defendant, Clark, of Cincinnati, wishes to change his plea from 'not guilty' to 'guilty'."

Clark then stepped forward. "Do you plead guilty?" asked Judge Anderson.

"I plead guilty," said Clark.

The prisoner was then separated from the other forty-five defendants and taken to jail to await the imposing of his sentence. Clark pleaded guilty to all the charges—five counts of conspiracy and fifty counts of being a principal to the actual illegal interstate shipment of dynamite and nitroglycerin.

Clark was business agent and president of local union No. 44, of the International Union of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers from January, 1908, to July, 1911. His activity in promoting explosions, Mr. Miller asserted, were carried on through letters written by Frank M. Ryan, president of the union, and the McNamara.

An ivory-handled umbrella bearing the initials "E. C." found in the wreckage of a dynamited bridge at Dayton, Ohio, Mr. Miller said, led to the disclosure that Clark actually had caused the explosion, having used the umbrella to protect the dynamite from the rain and then leaving it behind.

Clark also was charged with carrying out plots against employers of non-union labor. In connection with a scheme to blow up the Harrison avenue viaduct at Cincinnati, Mr. Miller alleged, Clark wrote to Ryan: "It would be dangerous for me to buy explosives down here. You had better send a stranger. I have gotten one man out of a lot of trouble already. I am afraid I can't do much more. For the police judge said, 'For God's sake don't bring this bunch before me again, or I'll have to do something.'"

Herbert S. Hockin, acting secretary treasurer of the union, was charged by Mr. Miller with "double dealing" with Clark.

"The executive board of the Iron Workers' union agreed upon a fixed price of $200 for each job," said Mr. Miller to the jury. "For the blowing up of a bridge over the Miami river at Dayton, May 3, 1908, Hockin paid Clark only $122.50, thus holding out part of the fee."

Pointing toward Eugene A. Clancy and Olaf A. Tvietsmo, of San Francisco, Mr. Miller said it would be shown that they helped in promoting the Los Angeles Times disaster, and that "Jack" Bright, known as J. E. Munsey, for two weeks after the explosion harbored J. B. McNamara at Salt Lake City, Utah.

NEARLY BURNED TO DEATH

Home and Curios of Hamlin Garland, the Author, Destroyed.

West Salem, Wis., Oct. 8. — The home of Hamlin Garland was burned and the author had a narrow escape from death.

Awakened by the flames, he was obliged to leap from a second-story window. A domestic received burns which are serious. The fire was caused by an explosion of gasoline.

Valuable curios gathered by Mr. Garland in all parts of the world, besides the house and other furniture, were destroyed.

SIX DEAD IN MOTOR CRASH

Automobilist Lost Control and Machine Collided With Trolley Car.

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 8.—Six persons are dead as the result of a collision between an automobile and a car on the Dallas-Fort Worth interurban line.

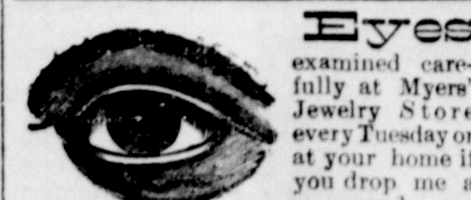

The victims are Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Cornelius, their three children and a young woman who was a guest of Mrs. Cornelius. Cornelius lost control of his car.

Broncho's Kick Kills Boy.

Fifty rebels were killed and many wounded. The others have been disarmed.

POWERS TO INTERVENE

All Now in Accord in Demand For Peace in Balkans.

London, Oct. 8.—The reported decision of the powers to intervene in the Balkans has given a more optimistic tone to the troublesome situation.

This is reflected in the exchanges of Europe, where stocks in general have rallied from the flurry of last week.

It is now believed that all the powers are in accord in their demand for peace in the Balkans. Representation will be made at once at Constantinople to that effect. At the Turkish capital all the powers will meet to present individually a verbal communication to the Porte identical to that presented to the Balkan states by Russia and Austria.

The powers, it is known, will state emphatically their disapproval of any fighting in the Balkans and will demand that the little states leave to them any Macedonian reforms that are to be made.

It is unlikely that Great Britain, who has hung back all along, will take any prominent part in the squelching of war in the Balkans. She fears to offend her Moslem subjects in India. The Mohammedans of Bengal met in great numbers at Calcutta to denounce in spirited terms what they are pleased to call a conspiracy on the part of the Christian powers to rob the Moslems of their kingdoms.

Vatican Announces He Would Act in Balkan Trouble.

London, Oct. 8.—The announcement that the pope is prepared to offer mediation in the Balkans was made by the Vatican after a hurried meeting of the Sacred Congregation, according to a news agency dispatch from Rome.

$200,000 STOLEN IN HAVANA

One of the $10,000 Bills Turns Up in a Bank.

Havana, Cuba, Oct. 8.—The missing $200,000 from the National Bank of Cuba, which was mailed to the National Park bank, of New York, was stolen here, as one of the listed $10,000 bills has been found.

It now seems certain that the money was stolen either in the National Bank of Cuba or in the Havana postoffice.

Senor Wamerchant, the acting president of the National Bank of Cuba, said that he is absolutely certain that the money was mailed in a registered letter. He said that the keeper of the money vault counted twenty $10,000 bills in his presence, in the presence of his assistant and a young woman employee.

The Royal Bank of Canada, of Havana, notified the National Bank of Cuba and M. Paczold that it found one of the missing $10,000 bills among $120,000 which the National bank paid to the Royal bank on the afternoon of Oct. 4.

INDEPENDENTS RAISE PRICE OF COAL

Ask 75 to 85 Cents a Ton More at Mines.

Pottsville, Pa., Oct. 7.—As a direct result, it is said, of the panic which has struck coal dealers in the larger cities, who are offering independent operators big premiums for anthracite, several independent operators in this section made a big raise in the price of coal.

The St. Clair independents, who are taking the lead in the matter, raised the price of pea and chestnut coal from 75 to 85 cents a ton. At this rate the chestnut coal at the mines is now more than $5 a ton.

The independents made a statement declaring they would not sell coal under the price they can get for it on the cars at Philadelphia and in New York.

The Reading Coal and Iron company declared it will not be a party to any further raise in prices. The action of the independents is believed to have been inspired by the agents of Philadelphia and New York dealers, who have been canvassing this region for contracts ever since anthracite has been selling at a premium in certain sections.

Customs Officials Had Seized $400,000 Worth of Baggage.

New York, Oct. 8.—Frank J. Gould obtained release of all of the $400,000 worth of baggage which the customs authorities seized when he and Mrs. Gould and her sisters arrived last Friday from their home in Paris.

Under protest Mr. Gould paid $2844 on the dutiable articles, but the greater part of the valuable jewelry was shown to have been of American purchase or to have been assessed before by the customs authorities.

Mr. Gould will carry to the courts his fight against paying any duty at all, declaring that he is now exempt as a non-resident, and that he intend only to pay a visit to this country.

PUT MORGAN TALE UP TO MACVEAGH

Charles Russell Repeats Story to Clapp Committee.

REPORTER BACKS HIM UP

Declares MacVeagh Incident Has Been Overstated, But Is Substantially Correct.

Washington, Oct. 8.—The allegation that Roosevelt as president in 1904 demanded in a telephone conversation with J. Pierpont Morgan that the New York financier give $100,000 to the Roosevelt campaign fund was delved into by the campaign probers, headed by Senator Clapp.

The result was a considerably amended tale, put up to Wayne MacVeagh, of Philadelphia, who is declared to have related it for publication in a magazine two years ago, but it was not published.

As it emerged from the renovation undertaken by two witnesses, Charles Edward Russell, Socialist nominee in New York, and Judson C. Welliver, a political writer for newspapers supporting Roosevelt, the tale set forth that it was not Roosevelt himself who made a demand on Morgan, but was the late E. H. Harriman, and that the amount was $50,000. It was to be inferred that this may have been the contribution to the so-called "Harriman fund," which Mr. Morgan testified last week he made.

As originally published the tale had it that Roosevelt from the White House made the demand on Morgan, and that he wanted $100,000. Morgan was declared to have referred to Mr. Roosevelt as a "maniac" in a conversation with MacVeagh.

Russell testified as to the truth in general of the tale, which had been denied both by Roosevelt and Morgan. The Socialist said he had obtained it from a representative of Harriman's Magazine in 1910 and that it had come directly from Wayne MacVeagh.

He named Welliver, who admitted on the stand that he had obtained a tale somewhat of this nature from MacVeagh. He then gave his version, adding that Harriman asked for the additional contribution at the specific instance of Roosevelt.

Charles R. Crane, of Chicago, testified that he gave $26,684.40 to Senator LaFollette's pre-convention campaign this year and $10,000 to Governor Wilson's. Elton H. Hooker, treasurer of the Progressive party, charged last week that Crane gave $70,000 to Wilson and a like sum to LaFollette at the same time.

J. J. Hannan, LaFollette's pre-convention campaign manager, put into the record a statement of the LaFollette receipts and expenditures. This showed that the total amount collected for the Wisconsin senator was $63,969.56, and that the expenditures were $63,961.58.

According to this list, Charles R. Crane was the largest contributor. He is credited with $23,500, given in seven installments extending over the period from Dec. 14, 1911, to June 17, 1912.

Gifford Pinchot, Amos Pinchot and Representative William Kent, of California, each contributed $10,000; Alfred S. Baker gave $2000; Rudolph Spreckels, $3000; William Flinn, of Pennsylvania, $1000, and Senator LaFollette himself, $1500.

The account contains entries of two loans, one of $1000 by Medill McCormick, and one of $500 by Senator Gronna, of North Dakota. Both were marked "repaid."

Lesser contributions were: E. A. Scripps, $450; Mrs. Glendower Evans, $276.26; Judson C. Welliver, $50; A. E. Fruit, $100; J. D. Hodder, $50. From contributors in amounts less than $25 there was forthcoming $281.50. Interest on bank balances was $47.15; from sales on furniture was received $172.65, and from newspapers for news matter $42.

The account shows $10,817.03 was paid for the Washington headquarters and the Chicago headquarters spent $10,450. LaFollette's expenses at the Republican national convention were $1558.13, and the Progressive conference held in Chicago last October cost the LaFollette managers $638.75.

GUARD BECKER PROSECUTOR

District Attorney Appears at Trial With Bodyguard.

ONLY ONE JUROR SECURED

Examination of Talesmen Proceeded So Slowly Justice Goff Threatened to Hold Night Sessions.

New York, Oct. 8.—The first day of the trial of Police Lieutenant Charles Becker for the murder of gambler Herman Rosenthal was marked by a most unusual incident.

District Attorney Charles S. Whitman appeared in court with a bodyguard of detectives to protect him from the vengeance of the gangmen which his friends declare threatens him.

"If these gangmen intend to 'get me, they'll get me," said the district attorney, in commenting on this unusual precaution. "Bodyguard or no bodyguard, they can 'get' me as they have got lots of others. But I'm not afraid. I have the bodyguard for my wife's sake."

Out of fourteen examined from the special panel of 250 talesmen called for jury duty, only one juror had been chosen when the first day's session closed. He was Harold B. Skinner, an electrical engineer.

Of the other thirteen talesmen three were peremptorily challenged by the state and four by the defense. Becker himself instructed his counsel, John F. McIntyre, to make the challenges in each case. The others were disqualified by the court for bias or upon challenges for cause by counsel.

The examination proceeded so slowly that Justice Goff, in adjourning the case, threatened to hold night sessions if the jury were not picked by tonight. One of the peremptory challenges of the prosecution was exercised on the first talesman called after he had said that he was a former member of the police force. In nearly every instance talesmen acknowledged that they had formed opinions on the case from reading the newspapers, and those who were disqualified declared that their opinions would influence their verdict.

The criterion of the fitness of a juror as set up by District Attorney Whitman was based chiefly upon whether the talesman knew any member of the police department, any of counsel for the defense or members of any of the detective agencies employed by the defense in getting evidence. The questions of Mr. McIntyre were timed to determine whether the talesmen had any acquaintance with any of the state's witnesses or any members of the grand jury which indicted Becker.

Attorney McIntyre declared that he had accepted Skinner because he believed he had a "logical mind capable of analyzing character."

That Becker had lost weight as the result of his two months' confinement in the Tombs was apparent to those who knew him when he entered the court room. That he was mentally alert, however, became apparent from the manner in which he studied each talesman. Frequently he would signal his counsel for a conference while the latter was in the midst of volleying questions.

NEW BORN BABE IN WEEDS

Lies For Four Hours Without a Thread of Clothing.

Washington, Oct. 8.—A new born baby boy lay for at least four hours deserted by his mother, unnoticed by the neighbors and without a thread of clothing to protect him from the chilling air.

He was found lying face down on a rough, dirty board concealed in a clump of weeds in a vacant lot behind a poolroom.

When the baby was picked up by a policeman he was cold, but still alive. The foundling was taken to the Children's hospital, where he will recover. There is no clue, say the police, as to the mother.

Cleveland Vice Squad Reports Success.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 8.—According to announcement by Lieutenant Martinec, who has had charge of the thirty-five plain clothes patrolmen detailed two months ago as a special "vice squad," more than 500 women of questionable reputation have been driven out of town and practically all the "girl" saloons with cheap girl rooms attached, have been put out of business.

Farmer Never Heard of Wilson.

Rising Sun, Md., Oct. 8.—Between teaching his children their lessons and the harvesting of his enormous crops Harry Nelson, a prominent Fromont farmer, had no time to learn who the Democratic presidential candidate was until Monday, when in Philadelphia he observed a Wilson demonstration on Broad street. "Who's Wilson?" he inquired of a bystander.

WIFE MAY LIE TO HUSBAND

But Kansas Court Says Provocation Must Be Great.

Kansas City, Oct. 8.—If "provocation is great" and "circumstances tend to moral justification," a wife may lie to her husband, according to a decision by the Kansas City court of appeals in the case of Mrs. Carrie Dimmitt, of Monroe, Mo., who is suing her husband, James J. Dimmitt, a merchant, for the custody of their child.

A fortune brought strife to the Dimmitts. Mrs. Dimmitt several months ago fell heir to $125,000 left by an uncle, who died in Italy. The money was to be held in trust by another Kansas man during his life.

An insurance company learned of the bequest and offered to lend Mrs. Dimmitt $25,000 on her chances of outliving the trustee if she could pass a physical examination.

Mrs. Dimmitt underwent an examination by a physician. Mr. Dimmitt, not knowing the reason and not believing his wife's ill health plea, was angry. The quarrel led to divorce. The court awarded the child to the mother. She said she did not tell her husband about the money "for fear he would spend it." She collected the $25,000.

GUN EXPLODES; EIGHT HURT

Accident in Tobyhanna, Pa., Camp of Field Artillery.

Washington, Oct. 8.—Eight men of Battery F, Third United States Field Artillery, were injured by the premature explosion of a three-inch gun in the camp in Tobyhanna, Pa. Defective ammunition is blamed.

William E. Erbeck, the most seriously hurt, was brought to a hospital in Washington. Privates Andrew Miller, Peter Marion, Nelson D. Blasse, Charles A. Houchell, Fred McNamee, Fred Lineham and Corporal John Harsch were hurt, but none of them seriously.

The company was returning from the Connecticut maneuvers, and had stopped in Tobyhanna for target practice. A shell exploded before the breech block of the gun had been closed. Six of the men were hurt by pieces of flying metal.

Resent Animal's Effort to "Nose" Hives From Resting Place.

Penn Yan, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Resenting the efforts of a horse to "nose" their hives from their resting places, two colonies of bees attacked the equine, which had been left standing for a few minutes while its owner transacted some business. The bees stung the enemy in hundreds of places, and a veterinary was summoned, but the animal died in great agony.

Navigation on the Oagee.

One of the very crookednest streams anywhere is the Oagee river in Missouri. In that region they tell of a farmer living on the banks of that river who had a small flatboat, which, one day, he loaded with produce and floated down to market, six miles away. He exchanged the produce for goods at one of the stores and loaded his goods in the flatboat.

"How are you going to get your stuff home, Bill?" asked a friend. "Got a steamboat to tow you back?"

"I am going to float it back," was the response.

"How are you going to do that? I don't understand."

"I guess you don't know much about this river. It doubles on itself just below here and runs back to within less than a quarter of a mile of my place. I've got a landing on both banks, and a team of horses that can drag the boat over from one landing to the other."

The Beauty of a Minnow.

THE MYSTERY OF THE CAUSEWAY

"After they carried Sir Andrew away, I must have gone off my head for awhile. What would they say to me for setting such a trap for my master? That was the only thing I could think about. I ran back and pulled up the sticks, and carried away the gun to the cottage here."

"But you saw the policeman arrest the man whom we may presume to be the murderer?"

"Yes, sir; but I was too wild to reason it out. I made up my mind this morning to tell them all about it at the inquest. That is the truth."

"Did you use the punt last night?"

"No, sir, it must have been the man that was caught. I missed her this morning, and after a search found her in the reeds near the island where she had drifted. Though I don't see how you could have known anything about the punt, sir."

"The iron-shod pole had chipped the landing-stage. The other man had ferried himself across rather than use the causeway. And now please fetch me the plans and the gun."

When Warner returned Peace slipped the envelope into his pocket, and examined the weapon with great care, snapping the lock twice.

"You had eased the trigger, eh?"

"Yes, sir; I thought a light pull would be best, so I oiled and loosened the screws."

The little man handed it back to him and turned away, staring over the lake towards the distant woodlands, with his hands clasped behind his back.

"That fellow, sir—he must have done it, don't you think?" asked the under-keeper.

"So it would seem, Warner," said Addington Peace over his shoulder.

It was eleven o'clock on the following day when Peace was announced. I was sitting in the garden of my friend's cottage smoking my pipe and reading the paper. From within the villa came the sound of whistling that told of my host working at his Academy picture.

"Why, Peace," I said, "what brings you here?"

He seated himself on a corner of the garden bench and lit a cigarette.

"I went to London last night," he told me. "And as I had to pass your friend's house on the way from the station to Atrile Hall, I thought I would call in and see you."

"Any further news?"

"I have had an interesting visit. The botanist with the beard has stepped into a leading part in our little tragedy, Mr. Phillips."

"Do you mean—"

"Yes, I believe him to be the murderer of Sir Andrew Cheyne."

"Then the man under arrest is innocent."

"That scarcely describes him—but he had no hand in this crime."

"Confound you and your riddles," I said. "Where is the murderer? Have you caught him?"

"There is a carriage at the door. If you care to come along perhaps I may be able to show him to you."

It was a swift horse from the stables of Atrile Hall, and we covered the ground quickly. There was little talk between us. Twelve had struck when we stepped out at the overhanging porch of the old gray mansion and walked through into the library that overlooked the terrace and the lake.

By the window, twisting his cap in his nervous fingers, stood Jake Warner. Peace nodded him a good morning, and then slipped away with a word of apology.

"The detective gentleman wired that he wanted to see me," said Warner, anxiously. "Do you know why, sir?"

I told him no, and he dropped into an uneasy silence. I amused myself by walking from picture to picture, for the walls were hung with splendid portraits—Gainsborough, Lely and Romney—it was a veritable exhibition of those great masters. At last the door opened and the little man appeared, glancing from one to the other of us with his shrewd, observant eyes.

"Will you follow me, if you please?" he said.

We ramped up the great staircase, a wide sweep of polished oak, where a dozen men could have walked abreast, and so down a high-roofed passage into a majestic bedroom. In the center stood a venerable four-poster bedstead. The columns that supported the canopy were finely carved, and over the head was a faded coat of arms pictured in the needlework of two hundred years ago. The lattice windows were open. From without came the faint piping of the nestling birds.

Upon the bed lay something covered with white sheeting.

Peace walked up to it and paused, staring hard at the keeper, who stood beside me. Then with a gentle hand he lifted the sheet. On the pillow lay the head of an elderly man, dark and full bearded.

Warner stepped back, clutching my arm.

"It's the botanist," he stammered. "What is he doing here? Was it him as killed my master, sir?"

"Yes," said the little detective; "he killed Sir Andrew Cheyne."

For a moment he stooped, busying himself about the head. With a gentle pull he lifted the heavy beard away. It was a face younger by a score of years than lay upon the pillows, a face handsome, after its fashion, though deep lined with evil days and ways.

"That is also true," said Inspector Addington Peace, reverently replacing the white sheet.

It was an hour afterwards that Peace gave me the details. We were leaning against the stone balustrade of the terrace looking over the lake to the pleasant park land beyond. The breeze-swept rushes that marked the line of the causeway, the gables of the island pavilion that peered above the foliage, lay to our right, framed in the rippling blue of the mere.

"My first important discovery," he said, "was a strand of pack-thread tied to a young sapling at the spot where the body of Sir Andrew was found. On the other side of the path was a narrow hole between the slabs of granite, where a peg had lately been driven in. The rushes about it were broken here and there. The conclusion of a spring gun was obvious, and the reason suggested by the track of foxes along the edge of the reeds. Was the death an accident, after all? If so, what business had the stranger under arrest—Fenton, I now find, is his name—upon the island at so late an hour?"

"My conversation with the keeper gave me some interesting results. It was plainly murder, and no accident. Some one had raised the muzzle of the gun so that it might kill a man and not a fox. Some one had expected a visitor to the island that night against whom he desired to revenge himself. Was Fenton guilty? The evidence against him seemed almost conclusive. He had admitted, you will remember, that he had an appointment with Sir Andrew. Yet, after he had set the trap, why had he continued to risk discovery by loitering about the causeway? How had he known that the spring gun was there at all? Why had he brought a loaded revolver? Why had he borrowed the punt and reached the island by so unexpected a manner? Was he also afraid of some one or some thing? My mind began to turn from him to the second stranger, the botanist with the collecting case. He at least had information about the setting of the gun."

"There was still a further point. Sir Andrew had been shot full in the chest. If he had been walking down the causeway he would have been hit in the side. How was that?"

"Yesterday morning after I sent you away I walked into the village to make inquiries. They have few visitors, and the landlord of the inn remembered the naturalist. He had only once visited the place, driving over from the station, and disappearing for several hours. A hot-tempered man, nervous and excitable—so he described him. When the cab was late he had broken out in a foreign tongue. That was all he knew of him."

"I caught the 3:15 to London and found Scotland Yard in the possession of some additional details. Sir Andrew had been in town for a fortnight living very quietly at a small hotel off Piccadilly. He had no servant with him. He had been a wild, extravagant lad, they told me, and when his uncle had tired of paying his bills he had tried the stage, got deeper into debt, and finally fled to the Continent, where he lived on a small allowance that the old man made him. All this struck me as curious. The rake had indeed reformed if he heralded his accession to great wealth by dropping a servant and living quietly in a small hotel. Had he other reasons than economy?"

"I visited the hotel that night. Sir Andrew had received few visitors, the porter told me. I described the botanist, without success. Then I tried Fenton. The porter recognized my description at once. He had called twice, the first time shortly after Sir Andrew's arrival, the second time on Tuesday evening. The waiter who had taken him up to the baronet's sitting-room told me that the first interview had been long, and that they had quarreled violently on the stairs."

"You shall never so much as see the place. If you go there before settling with me I communicate with the police at once." He remembered some such threat shouted by Fenton on leaving. The second interview had been short, and, so far as he knew, friendly.

"I made a careful search of Sir Andrew's room. It was there that I solved the problem of the mystery; for in his dressing case was an old 'make-up' box, no doubt a survival from his days upon the stage; and in the box was a full brown beard!"

"And so he was the botanist?" I said with a shiver.

"Yes, Mr. Phillips, he was the botanist."

There was silence between us for a while. I looked up at the splendid front of the ancient hall, and then across the lawns, over the sparkling mere to the park and the forest lands beyond.

"Was it for this?" I asked with a wave of the hand.
